Rise to thy proper place in life— Trample upon all sin, But still the gentle hand hold out To help the wanderer in.

So live, in faith and noble deed.

Till earth returns to earth—
So live, that men shall mark the time
Gave such a mortal birth.

A FOUR O'CLOCK.

Ah, happy day, refuse to go!
Hang in the beavens forever so!
Forever in the mid afternoon.
Ah, happy day of happy June!
Pour out thy sunshine on the hill,
The piny wood with perfuse fill.
And breathe across the singing sess
Land-scented breezes that shall be
Sweet as the gardens that they pass,
Where children tumble in the grass!

Whole in himself, a common good; Our greatest, yet with least pretens freat in council and great in war, Foremost captain of his time, Rich in saving common-sense, And, as the greatest only are, In his simplicity sublime.

The home of General Grant is an agreeable one to the visitor, and plainly shows the nature and taste of the occupant Tall walnut book-cases surround three sides of the library. Exerything relating to the business of war is there, and histories in abundance. The usual display of fiction, essays, bi-ography, philosophy and works of gen-eral information and reference line the shelves. On the mantel is a cigar stand. a bronze statuette of a drummer, and another of a bugler. Engravings of Washington, Lincoln, Sherman and Sheridan, and several photographs of Roger's statuettes are the only pictures in the room. Easy chairs and lounges are placed carelessly about the room, and the library is wihout doubt the most cheerful and inviting apart-
